

The background image shows a combine harvester operating in a field of crops. The machine is angled towards the right of the frame, with its header cutting through the plants. A long shadow of the combine stretches across the ground to the left. The sky above is a clear, pale yellow-orange, suggesting a bright, possibly overexposed sun. The overall composition is slightly grainy and has a vintage feel.

The background photo with the combine in the sun, reflecting its shadow was able to have its opacity changed enough that it could be light enough for the words on it to be read. The picture gives the reader a more calm feeling about what the article is about and it reflects the mood of the article. The reader should feel more relaxed about the article before ever reading it. The picture helps the story by showing that the U.S. will and needs to produce more farm machinery for the benefits of Americans, Central Americans, and the rest of the nation. This picture, I felt, helped give this article an extra “shove” to help get its point across.

The production of equipment is vitally important for all farmers. The U.S. is hoping to create more farm equipment by the year 2025 for agriculture around the nation.
